Designer goes for Oscar after changes hit home

THE satisfaction of a doing a good day's work is knowing you've made your customers happy.

For Oscar pet food home delivery franchise owners that means making their four-legged friends happy too.

As a graphic designer Ian Elliott had spent 25 years keeping customers happy until changing times forced him to change career, ultimately leading him to the Oscar franchise network. He said: "I've worked from home since gaining my degree in graphic design. I still needed to work and also to continue working from home but this time with the support of a proven business system and company backing."

Oscar is a full member of the British Franchise Association.
