A better service

AS a commissioned officer in the British Army, John Allen had a trade that offered little in the way of prospects for a career outside the Forces.

That was until he discovered pet food delivery franchise Oscar. Mr Allen, of Buxton, Derbyshire, said: "It was my decision to leave the Army as I was spending too much time away. Along with my partner Katie, we wanted to find something that offered a better quality of lifestyle."

Franchising presented excellent opportunities for self-employment and it was a joint love of animals that led them to Oscar.

"In Oscar we found passion, quality and belief in a product that offers a first-class service to pet owners," said Mr Allen.
