TOM CARTMALE SWAPPED HIS CAREER AS A CHEF FOR AN OSCAR PET FOOD DELIVERY FRANCHISE, AND HE HASN'T LOOKED BACK SINCE

Tom Cartmale from Stoke-on-Trent decided he wanted to control his career after working for almost 30 years as a chef. Redundancy forced the issue and franchising secured his future plans.

"Feeding animals with a quality range of foods selected to suit their age, breed and lifestyle meant that my knowledge of how to serve up a good meal could be passed onto a more deserving customer," says Tom. "Catering was all I knew and after hanging up my chef's hat OSCAR not only gave me a career changing opportunity, it put a new slant on my expertise."

ENTHUSIASTIC

That was 11 years ago, but explains Tom: "I enjoy my work and I'm still enthusiastic. To have job satisfaction while earning a living makes running my own business worthwhile. With over 500 customers to support, they are more than happy to pass on the benefits of my service, so I am rewarded time and time again."

He adds: "Introducing new customers to OSCAR brings me a wealth of stories, from the dog with a constant upset tummy - fed pork sausages as a treat and a variety of different foods - to the Shar Pei with a serious skin and coat problem, which was solved by feeding it quality OSCAR foods. Training my customers to understand the importance of quality feeding comes via our honest label policy. A satisfied customer once said he had become a 'pet food snob' after having learnt to appreciate the benefits of a healthy diet."

With back-up from experts in veterinary care, behaviour and nutrition, Tom is proud of the unique pet care service he offers: "Dedication to my work is something I like to pass on to new franchisees, and as a trainer I would always recommend following the OSCAR system - it's tried, tested and, believe me, I know it works."
